Dear Dr. Thorne:

At last we have a cooperative subscriber who sends a pretty good specimen!

This is from San Diego County: "Enclosed are leaves and a blossom (?) off a plant in our yard. Several plants like this come up every year and I've thought it looks so much like spinach I've been tempted to try to eat it. However, I'd feel better if you can identify and assure me it's not poisonous. Hope it's fresh enough to identify. If not, any suggestions on how to better send another sample will be appreciated."

Cordially,
